

Quality Education World

What would a world where quality education was available to every person look like? Just imagine.

In a world where quality education was available to every person...

Education would be a top priority.

THIS WOULD MEAN THAT:

- Governments would invest enough money to make sure that every person was well educated.
- Everyone would read history books that include stories about both women and men who have shaped their communities and culture.
- Children would go to school without worrying about their safety.
- Everyone would have access to all the books and technology they need to learn and grow.
- Everyone would be taught Science, Maths, History, and Art; no one would think that these subjects were only for boys or only for girls.
- Everyone would learn how to care for our planet and all people equally, those living nearby and far away.

Help design a Quality Education world by adding two thoughts of your own to the ideas above, or choose two from above that you think are really important.

How do we get from where we are now to this great world where quality education is available to all?

This is what the people and organizations, like Irish Aid, who are working to achieve Global Goal 4: Quality Education, are trying to make happen.
